BILLION-DOLLAR MIAMI

1. BUY BEFORE BASEL

Art world darlings Nikolai and Simon Haas create otherworldly, biomorphic sculptures and furnishings. Before their first solo exhibition at The Bass museum this fall, art enthusiasts are scooping up pieces, like these ceramics (price upon request, r-and-company.com), for their private collections.

2. THE PERSONAL CELEBRITY CHEF

How does a billionaire do a summer cookout? It begins with Meatmarket's (meatmarket.net) star chef Sean Brasel firing up the grill, a half dozen Australian wagyu beef tomahawk ribeyes, and whoever happens to be on your very fabulous backyard barbecue invite list. Brasel's menu starts at $3,500 (not including liquor or staff costs)—from there, the sky is the limit.

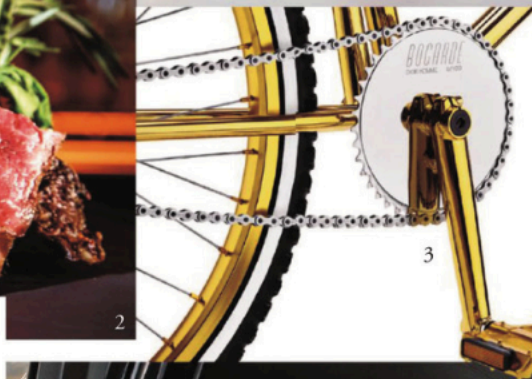

3. WHEELIE COOL

There are beach cruisers and there are racing bikes. And then there's the Dior Homme x Bogarde Gold BMX (diorhomme.com). This limited-edition (only 100 exist) $4,700 bicycle features a gold metal finish, calfskin details, and the Dior logo and signature bee on the brakes and frame.

4. TAILGATE IN STYLE

Named for the world's largest diamond, the Rolls-Royce Cullinan is the premier automaker's first SUV, and it's as capable as it is elegant. Niceties include a Champagne fridge and slide-out leather seats (from $325,000). Rolls-Royce Motor Cars Miami, 2060 Biscayne Blvd., 877.882.5894

5. GO BIG OR GO HOME

Billionaires don't buy magnums—they buy jeroboams. It's a boss move that gets you twice as much Champagne to sip (or spray), plus bragging rights. Go really big with a full case of Krug Grande Cuvée. $1,470 for 3 L bottle, clost19.com
